Mathematics

Today in maths you are learning to count in 10's. You will be using "count in 10's" to help you to count grouped objects and find out how many they have altogether. By grouping ten's, you will also be able to find out the total. You will also explore the number pattern of the 10's in a sequence don't forget to check if the sequence is going forward or backwards.

Watch the video for support and here is the task sheet.

Challenge – We have practicing counting in 10 to 100 but can you count past 100? Have a go counting past 100 in 10's. The first numbers are 110, 120...

Question for the day

Yesterday's answer: The replica dinosaur skeleton that was held in the Natural History museum's great hall was Dippy the Diplodocus. The diplodocus skeleton was displayed for 112 years in the London museum but left the museum in 2017. It was a replica made based on the original skeleton found in 1898 it was the first full standing example of a diplodocus to ever go on display.

Do you know your dinosaurs? Which Dinosaur is the largest? Can you name it?
