Did you know...? This day in history?

1980 – The Rubik's Cube made its international debut at the Ideal Toy Corp. in Earl's Court, London. Has anyone solved one before?

Writing

Well done on a great week of traditional tale features – today we'll be finishing with subordinating clauses to vary the sound of our sentences.

Watch Miss. Choudhry's video here for your lessons and all tasks

Be sure to keep joining your handwriting too!

Reading

Today you will be completing a cold comprehension task. An extract from a text has been selected for you to read, once you have read the extract and watched the video, you can answer comprehension questions about the text.

You can find the video for the lesson here

You can access the text here

Mathematics

Today we will be reviewing some of our learning on Multiplication: we will be revisiting some of our key topics of the year so far. You'll need something to write with and some paper and you can find the lesson here.

Foundation Subject

Science

Today in science we will be exploring how the proximity of a light source can affect a shadow. We will then be conducting our very own experiments to test what happens to shadows when you change the proximity of a light source.

So, join Professor Williams and watch the lesson here

You may want to watch these short videos to support your understanding of light and shadows. Here is the link to the first video and here is the link to the second video.

Art Challenge

This week we are asking you to design a new book cover for a book of your choice... It can be for any type of book: perhaps you want to choose your favourite author or maybe one of the books we have read in school?

If you need some ideas here are some book covers below or take a look at home!

Question for the day

If you could add a new subject to our school learning... what would it be?
